So impressed with the activities in this book!

By JoanOH

If you have a child or grandchild ages 8 to 12 or 13, buy this book. Buy it now. This is a wonderful way to encourage your child to do some fun and sometimes educational activities in those "I'm bored" times. The 101 activities are very diversified -- from "learn how to use chopsticks" to "paint like a famous artist" to "spin a basketball on your fingertip". Just a wonderful variety with specific instructions. There are sports themed tasks, cooking, physical, mental, artistic, mathematical, and just plain fun. I plan on giving this book to my 9 year old grandson when he visits. Some tasks we will do together, some he can do on his own. It's just a wonderful book and I plan on spreading the word about this to all my parent and grandparent friends. Do your child a favor - buy this today!

101 Answers to the Question "What Can I Do?" ...

By delicateflower152

"101 Things to Do Before You Grow Up" is exactly what you need when your hear the all too familiar refrain “I’m bored, what can I do?” Laura Dower has compiled a group of 101 activities that should provide children/grandchildren with a wide variety of choices that will meet almost any interest they may have. A colorful cardboard jacket covers the spiral-bound pages of the book. The book lies flat when opened.

From astronomy – “go stargazing!” to aerodynamics – “launch a plastic-bag parachute”, from historic preservation – “make a time capsule” to developing an unusual skill – “learn to juggle three objects”, from fostering an interest in becoming multi-lingual – “count to ten in five different languages” to science – “tell time without a clock”, and more, this book provides activities for a wide range of ages.

Few of the 101 choices require objects or materials not commonly found in the home. Cost for materials is minimal, yet the entertainment value of these activities is great. Clear, step-by-step instructions are easy to follow. Not only do some of the activities have educational aspects – e.g. “learn to read music”, many impart valuable life-skills – e.g. learning to tie three common knots.

I liked that there was a list of required materials given when the activity required them. Tips for making appropriate choices, safety tips, and informational factoids enhanced different activity selections. A banner at the end of an activity provided space for the date it was completed and a “square” in which a small sticker could be placed.

“101 Things to Do Before You Grow Up” is a wonderful book that will engage your children/grandchildren and will entertain them as they work to complete an activity. There are choices that are appropriate for children as young as five-years old and others that are appropriate for ‘tweens. In this era of electronic toys and on-line entertainment, “101 Things to Do Before You Grow Up” is a refreshing return to simpler, but equally entertaining activities.

What a Wonderful Idea! Great as a Gift

By K. Groh

This is such a great idea! I'm sure if we all sat down we could, over time, come up with a long list of fun things for kids to do in their (ample) spare time. But why do that when this book is already available. It is super cute with a hard cover and a lay-flat wire coil spine. The spine makes it great for keeping the book open as reference when trying something out.

The pages are really colorful and illustrated and all of the tasks are in simple and short steps - most of them fitting on one page. Some tasks might take a few hours, other just a minute or two. Perfect for the range of attention span for some days.

I really like the check off at the bottom of each page. There is a box for checking off or filling in DONE with a spot for the date completed. Many items can be done solo but many are fun group/family/one-on-one activities.

My daughter is excited to get through as much as possible.

This is also a great idea for a birthday gift. In fact, I may just get a few to stash in the 'birthday closet'!
