Lady Anne Blunt at her Best!

By AKS

Bedouin Tribes of the Euphrates by Lady Anne Blunt easily ranks as one of the most eloquent and charming 19th Century travel-adventure narratives ever written. The marvelous journey began at the Turkish port of Scanderoon in December 1877. The Blunt's horseback trek across the Syrian desert all the way to Baghdad and their return to Damascus lasted five months. Their exploits and day-by-day activities unfold amidst the undulating planes of the Mesopotamian homeland of the truculent Roála and Anazeh tribes. From the first page to the last, the reader is captivated and enthralled by Lady Anne's picturesque observations, which seem to transcend space and time. Her descriptions of every conceivable facet about the people and places that she and her husband Wilfrid encountered are rich, vibrant and delightful. Written in an uncommon, alluring style, she makes her reader long to be part of their wayward little caravan. Bedouin Tribes is amongst the very best books concerning the Bedouins and is endowed with many edifying revelations about their horses and the hostile environment where they evolved. Originally published in two volumes in 1881, there are four different versions on the market, priced from around $40 for a paperback copy to $200 for a quality hardbound edition.

It's OK

Story line jumps around a lot and some parts of text are missing or show up later in future text. Price was good and if you can hang with the story line and know the area she talks about, it's a good read. Maybe other editions are more complete. But I wouldn't pay more than $1.00 for this version.
